ANNUAL ANTHONY G. DIBARTOLOMEO

INTERNAL MEDICINE CONFERENCE

Friday, September 12, 2025

Morgantown Marriott at Waterfront Place

Named in honor of

Anthony G. DiBartolomeo, MD

Anthony G. DiBartolomeo, MD, earned his medical degree from the WVU School of Medicine in 1967, completed residency training at the University of Minnesota, and completed a fellowship at the University of Pittsburgh. A United States Army veteran, Dr. DiBartolomeo served as a rheumatologist for the Walter Reed General Hospital in Washington, DC, and then joined WVU as Professor of Medicine and Chief of the Section of Rheumatology. Dr. DiBartolomeo faithfully served the WVU School of Medicine in many roles, and was awarded outstanding teacher and outstanding faculty awards throughout his time with the institution.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Following this conference, participants should be able to:

- Collaborate effectively with multidisciplinary teams to implement solutions for optimizing patient flow.
- Identify and describe the pathophysiology, clinical presentation, and management of emerging infectious diseases.
- Explain the pathophysiology and staging of common head and neck cancers.
- Describe the mechanism, indications, and contraindications for endobronchial valve therapy.
- Initiate appropriate diagnostic workup and initial management of IBD in primary care.
- Incorporate reflective practice to foster continuous personal and professional growth.
- Deliver effective and compassionate palliative care using telemedicine platforms.
- Conduct focused evaluations of musculoskeletal complaints using evidence-based techniques.
- Recognize clinical signs of VEXAS syndrome and understand its underlying genetic mechanisms.
- Define and diagnose resistant hypertension, including identification of secondary causes.
- Apply ADA 2025 guideline updates to screening, diagnosis, and management of diabetes.
